Summer weekends

To our readers

It's summertime! This means getting a tan on the beach, eating ice cream on the stoop, trips to the shore and lots of lots of you escaping the city.

With so many of you away in July and August, and with many local businesses implementing summer hours, we decided to create a Summer Weekend edition, published on Thursdays throughout July and August. This special newspaper features extended movies, entertainment and going out content to help heat up your already-hot weekend.

And if you're sticking around the city, our newsroom remains busy with news, features, sports and events updates 24/7 on www.metro.us.

Narcissister bares it all for new work

Secret. A masked artist brings her erotic work to the Lower East Side.

Narcissister always wears a mask. Her new performance art piece will be projected on a building in the Lower East Side. / MILES DIXON, METRO

Artist Narcissister might not always wear a top, but she always dons a mask.

You might have seen the performance artist and dancer on "America's Got Talent," in paparazzi photos with Marilyn Manson or contorting in larger-than-life costumes at the Box, the Lower East Side nightclub.

Now, Narcissister is bringing a video installation to Petrella's Imports on Friday night, a newsstand on Bowery and Canal that has been repurposed into an art space. The piece, which will be projected on a building opposite Petrella's, will feature clips of women wearing the Narcissister mask and baring their breasts in public, an act that is legal in New York.

The artist, who does not disclose her real name or show her face, said she wanted to explore the "cultural psyche" around the body. "There's this idea that women's bodies are fundamentally sexual and consequently inappropriate in the public arena," she explained.

The artist said she created the character of Narcissister in 2007. "She's a plastic mask that lays on the floor of my studio, and when I put it on, I understand how much potential there is," she said. "Through the mask, I feel I can comment on issues that are greater than I could if I did not wear the mask."

The woman behind Narcissister was a professional dancer who trained with the Alvin Ailey School. After she quit dancing to focus on visual art, she discovered she could still utilize her dance background. She started dancing with her mask at burlesque shows before moving onto broader audiences, which included "America's Got Talent."

"I couldn't see how a project that includes strong erotic content could be on their program, but I was finally persuaded and I'm so glad I was," she said.

She admitted, though, that at the end of the day, she is glad she can shed the Narcissister character.

"I take a lot of comfort in the fact that Narcissister is separate from me," she said.

Secret identity

The installation is part of a larger project called "Narcissister Is You," which features different people in the Narcissister mask.

- Narcissister's installation will show at Petrella's Imports at 9 p.m. on Friday.
- You can also see her photography at the Rockaway! arts festival from June 29 to Sept. 1 at Fort Tilden.

Winning $7 million lottery ticket sold in Queens

The only $7 million winning lottery ticket for Monday night's Cash4Life drawing was sold at a Queens 7-Eleven, officials said.

As of Wednesday afternoon, the ticket was still unclaimed, according to the New York Lottery.

The top prize-winning ticket was bought at a Bayside store on Bell Boulevard. The winning numbers were 5,16, 21, 33, 47 and cash ball 4, lottery officials said.

Once the ticket is claimed, the $1,000-a-Day-for-Life winner can chose to collect the annuity prize or its predetermined cash value.

Lottery officials said they are also looking for the second-prize winner in the June 19 Cash4Life drawing. Worth at least $1 million, that ticket was sold in East Rockaway on Long Island.

Chinese millionaire holds lunch for the homeless

A wealthy Chinese businessman offered a free lunch of seared tuna and filet mignon to several hundred homeless New Yorkers at a swank Central Park restaurant on Wednesday.

Chen Guangbiao, who made his fortune in the recycling business, took out newspaper advertisements last week inviting "poor and destitute Americans" to lunch in the park.

Chen Guangbiao / GETTY IMAGES

Several hundred people showed up for the lunch and Chen entertained them by singing "We Are the World," and hosted a ceremony in which Chen was presented with a certificate declaring him "the world's greatest philanthropist."

"If you have a river (of wealth) you better know how to share it with other people," Chen said.

"We are one big happy family in the world."

Law. City set to pass municipal ID card

The New York City Council stands ready to approve the country's largest municipal identification card program on Thursday.

At least 34 members are signed on as co-sponsors to a bill that would offer the 500,000 immigrants living in the city without documentation a form of identification.

The bill has the support of Mayor Bill de Blasio, whose administration has spent months organizing a network of partners and locations that can roll the program out before 2015.

Splash. Free outdoor swimming pools open in the city on Friday

BILLY BECERRA, METRO

Summer's here — time to take a dip in one of New York City's free outdoor swimming pools.

Pool season starts Friday and runs through Sept. 1. The pools are open daily from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., with a break for cleaning between 3 p.m. and 4 p.m. Swimsuits must be worn in the pool area, according to the Parks Department. White shirts and hats can be worn, but no shirts with colors are allowed on deck.

Swimmers should leave food, glass bottles and electronic devices at home.

Turning the lens on World Cup watchers

Big game. A pair are documenting people watching the series in NYC.

Ryan Savini and Wesley Wingo are documenting all of the different countries watching the World Cup in NYC. / SAMAR KHURSHID, METRO

Two video producers in New York are documenting New York's passion for the World Cup.

Ryan Savini and Wesley Wingo are video producers and full-time soccer fans.

For the last two weeks, the 27-year-olds have been exploring bars and documenting people watching the World cup. They post the vignettes on their YouTube channel, NYXI, and Instagram, @weareNYXI.

The two say they want to make the game more accessible. "There's a snobbery people associate with it, " Savini said.

Their project looks at soccer culture in NYC. The duo chooses bars based on the teams playing. For instance, Savini went to Buka, a Nigerian bar in Brooklyn, where people watched the Nigeria-Argentina match on Wednesday. Meanwhile, Wingo visited an Argentinian bar in Queens. They also create drink recipe shorts titled "Taste of Defeat" for teams that have been eliminated.

Future stages

In the later stages of the tournament, they will focus on personal stories and interviews.

- After the World Cup, they plan on creating fan profiles to connect soccer club fans with bars and events in NYC.

Businesses to get "Made in Brooklyn" seal

A new grading system unveiled by the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce will finally answer how authentically Brooklyn certain products are.

Bronze, silver and gold seals will measure how much Brooklyn plays a part in the process.

Only businesses headquartered in Kings County making at least one physical product can apply for the seal.

"Brooklyn stands for authentic local craftsmanship, and when you see the 'Brooklyn Made' label, you know that's what you are getting," chamber President Carlo Scissura said.

The stamp makes its debut at Friday's Brooklyn Eats trade show on June 27.

Hooked. Limited free Wi-Fi for NYC airports

Air travelers in NYC will get free Wi-Fi for 30 minutes. / GETTY IMAGES

Passengers at New York City area airports will have access to free — but limited — Wi-Fi service this fall, officials said.

Flyers at four area airports, including JFK, LaGuardia and Newark, will get 30 minutes free service from Boingo Wireless as part of a new agreement approved by the Port Authority's board of commissioners on Wednesday.

After the first 30 minutes online, passengers can purchase more Wi-Fi time at hourly, daily or monthly rates. Currently, service costs $4.95 per hour, $7.95 per day or $9.95 per month at area airports.

Port Authority officials said flyers have consistently asked for free Wi-Fi, prompting the new arrangement. The deal also calls for connectivity upgrades and improvements at the airports.

The upgrades, which will increase internet speed and better connections, are expected to be completed in the fall.

Speaker. Boehner plans to file suit over Obama executive actions

U.S. House Speaker John Boehner said on Wednesday he is planning to file a lawsuit alleging that President Barack Obama has abused his executive authority by implementing policies without congressional approval.

Boehner told reporters the suit was aimed at protecting the rights of Congress under the Constitution and said Obama was ignoring the laws that it passes.

Boehner said the action was not aimed at impeachment proceedings.

The White House criticized congressional Republicans for considering a lawsuit against President Obama for his use of executive actions this year to move his agenda forward.

White House spokesman Josh Earnest told reporters such a move, funded by taxpayers, would not be supported by most Americans.

Google unveils TV set-top boxes with Android software

Integrating. Google also unveiled new digital tools that will be included in vehicles.

Google unveiled plans to get Android into the living room. While the company has already introduced software for televisions and the Chromecast dongle for streaming Web content to TVs, more devices will debut later this year featuring Android software, Google said Wednesday. Sony, Sharp, LG and Asustek Computer are among the partners for Android TV.

At Wednesday's event, Google also introduced Android Auto, its bid to get the software into cars. With Andy Brenner, a Google product manager, seated in a car on stage, the company said Android Auto will bring digital tools and media into vehicles, with capabilities for tailored maps. Developers will be able to use a software development kit to create apps for cars, the company said. Some cars will begin including Android Auto by the end of the year.

The event was interrupted twice by protesters, with one raising concerns about Google's efforts into robotics. Both were eventually dealt with by security workers, and Google executives joked about the interruptions from the stage.

Google's rivals are also expanding software options for mobile phones and tablets. Earlier this month, Apple introduced new health and connected-home features for its iOS software powering the iPhone and iPad. Amazon.com last week unveiled the Fire Phone, adding to its lineup of tablets and television hardware. REUTERS

Ready to wear

The conference pushed new wearable devices, too:

- New smartwatches, with one from LG Electronics that had apps loaded into it and that is immediately available through Google's Play online store.
- Some of the watches have capabilities that include using the gadget as a remote control for other devices.
- Google will begin selling a new Samsung watch supporting Android Wear today, called Gear Live.
- Google's push into wearable devices comes as Apple looks to move into the market. Several analysts have said Apple may unveil a smartwatch later this year.

OMG! New electronic spliff is a 'dope' idea, but there's no THC

Dutch firm E-Njoint BV has created what they describe as the world's first "100 percent legal electronic joint." The high-tech doobie does not contain THC, the active mind-altering component found in cannabis. Instead, it vaporizes natural ingredients propylene glycol and vegetable glycerine into water vapor, available in six flavors. When "smokers" take a puff, a green marijuana leaf lights up through its tip. E-Njoint CEO Menno Contant tells Metro why you don't need to get stoned to hit a happy high.

Visit us online at Metro.us/omg for more interviews.

Why did you come up with the E-Njoint?
We want to make a statement about Dutchies: We're not just about sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll. We're promoting a product that is innocent and fun; it's something to enjoy like a waterpipe.

What is the point if you don't get high?
Well, being high is one thing and enjoying the E-Njoint is another. You don't smoke a waterpipe to get high. You smoke a waterpipe to enjoy the flavors and enjoy the smell.

Who are you aiming this product at?
It's great for discotheques, clubs and bars. In Ibiza, [Spain], the best DJs in the world are doing their show and there are 30, 40 or 50 of these green lights going on. It's not a cigarette replacement, but it keeps your mind off things and it has a good taste in there.

Do you not think that this image will get children into smoking?
We're trying to stay away from all of that. On the package it states that it's not for under-18s.

In the future, could this be used to wean cannabis smokers off the drug?
Yeah, I think it can be used in therapy. If someone has been smoking pot for a long time, they're used to holding a spliff and there is a certain mind-set and feeling that goes with it.

Accurate and fast

Home testing

"Our biggest advance recently has been the ability to test at home," Ross says. "The idea that you could walk into a store and test at will is a very powerful tool." At-home HIV tests, such as OraQuick, which provides results from an oral swab sample in 20 minutes, mean people don't have to take time off work, the results are private, and they're as accurate as a blood test in a doctor's office. "It's as confidential as you need it to be at that moment, and then you decide who you want to tell after that." The one caveat with any test is that there is a window after possible exposure when a test may not produce accurate results. "If you're engaging in risky behavior, then my suggestion is get tested, then get tested again in another 3-6 months," Ross says.

Know your status

Prevention. Friday is National HIV Testing Day.

The face of new HIV infections is getting younger.

"The highest infection rate is in young people between the ages of 25 and 34, followed by 13 to 24," says Dr. Rachael Ross, a sexologist and co-host of the "The Doctors."

Friday is National HIV Testing Day, and the stats remain sobering. About 50,000 new HIV infections are diagnosed in the U.S. each year, according to the Centers for Disease Control; another 20 percent are unaware of their status. Every person between the ages of 13 and 64 should be tested annually.

Many people are confused about even the basics of how it's contracted — and it's not through kissing.

"Blood, semen, vaginal secretions and breast milk are the only fluids that the HIV virus can be transmitted in," Ross says.

One problem is that doctors aren't recommending testing at annual checkups. But many people also don't think they need to be tested because they're not engaging in risky behavior, which isn't limited to multiple partners and injectable drug use. "Risky sexual behavior is really just: Have you had sex without a condom, with somebody that you don't know their HIV status?"

A positive diagnosis is no longer the death sentence it used to be, Ross says. But learning your status comes with a larger moral — and legal — obligation to society.

"From that point on, be very careful about your sexual behavior — you can be criminally charged if you have unprotected sex with someone without telling them your HIV status," Ross says.

Promising research in the field is focused on prevention. Condoms remain a vital barrier to infection, but changing HIV statistics comes down to people educating themselves, Ross says adding: "There's a lot of stuff coming up on the horizon, but nothing in terms of curing."

At-risk age group

25-34

"The highest infection rate is in young people between the ages of 25 and 34, followed by 13 to 24," says Dr. Rachael Ross.

Butt-numbing cinema

In theory, long movies aren't bad. There are scores of movies that earn their length. Some are giant epics that wow with their majesty. Others use duration to comment on time as it passes, like Andy Warhol's "Empire" — eight hours of staring at the Empire State Building — or the 157-minute "Zodiac." But do you really need three hours based on an amusement park ride — especially if it's the third of a four-part franchise? Do you really need a rom-com TV spin-off that's longer than some baseball games? Beware of these too-long movies, which will make you wish you were washing laundry or filing taxes with that valuable time instead.

'Transformers: Age of Extinction'

165 MINUTES

Though last year's "Pain & Gain" was a relatively fleet 129 minutes, most of Michael Bay's films have hovered around the 150-minute mark — despite being abusively clangy and boasting the attention span of a hypercaffeinated 5-year-old. With the new "Transformers" movie closing in on three hours, that means this quadrilogy — based on a line of toys — now eats up more than 10 hours.

It's five minutes shorter than: "The Godfather"

'This is 40'

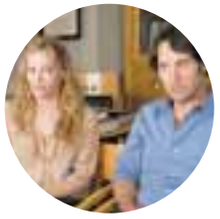
133 MINUTES

Judd Apatow does need spacious room to allow his loose, improv-heavy style to breathe. But he can go too far, especially since this look at middle age lacks a kicky hook (like, say, an unwanted pregnancy with Seth Rogen, as in "Knocked Up") or even a general center of gravity. For the record, it's not the first time he's gone this long: This is the same length as Apatow's extra-long DVD cut of "The 40-Year-Old Virgin."



It's seven minutes shorter than: John Cassavetes' "Husbands"

'Sex and the City 2'

146

146 MINUTES

We get it: It's based on a long-running TV show, and fans want a good hang with some old friends. But when the show was good it was because it was fast and zippy. Once the show treated Carrie and gang's problems seriously, the result was a drippy mess, and one that had no idea that it had turned into leaden and offensive wealth porn. For some reason the sequel has an entire sequence about gawking at shoes.

It's exactly as long as: "Goodfellas"

'Pirates of the Caribbean: At World's End'

168

168 MINUTES

What charm the first had was due to the surprise saboteur work of Johnny Depp. The sequels thought we all cared about the story. We didn't. Some of us probably couldn't remember that boring Orlando Bloom was actually the protagonist. Only MIT grads could follow the third, which is a massive tangled ball of unfollowable plots.

It's six minutes shorter than: "The Sound of Music"

'It's a Mad Mad Mad Mad World'

161

Director Stanley Kramer was riding high after a string of humorless "message movies" like "Inherit the Wind" and "Judgment at Nuremberg." So he decided to see if the same grandiosity applied to comedy. It didn't, though this film does have its moments. And it could have been worse: His original cut was four hours, shown only to horrified execs who ordered it hacked to pieces.

It's 15 minutes shorter than: "Judgment at Nuremberg"

2 CULTURE

181 MINUTES

The source of this glacial Brad Pitt drama, 1934's delightful "Death Takes a Holiday," runs 79 minutes. That makes this one of the few films to double the length of the source it's adapting. One could defend this by saying that it wants to suck you into its hypnotic, ghostly mood. You could also say that it's mood isn't propping up much substance, like Pitt's similarly pretty but vacant "Benjamin Button."

It's two minutes longer than: "Fiddler on the Roof"

4 Reasons to see 'Snowpiercer'

Dystopian thriller. This star-studded South Korean import arrives overseas quietly, receiving a modest release in America. It deserves better.

Review

'Snowpiercer'

Director: Bong Joon-ho

Stars: Chris Evans, Song Kang-ho

Rating: R

"Captain America" star Chris Evans (center, between John Hurt and Jamie Bell) plays a downtrodden man fighting his way through a class-divided train in "Snowpiercer." / RADIUS-TWC

1 It's a big movie
"Snowpiercer" isn't a mere specialty foreign release; it's a mainstream film. Not only that, it's a big movie with big familiar-to-America stars. Its lead is our current Captain America! Chris Evans plays a young but grizzled man who lives at the back of a train that carries with it the remainder of humanity. It's 2031, and due to a reckless attempt to stop climate change the world has frozen over. Those who survived live aboard a train plowing around the world in a giant circle, which unfortunately is segmented into class: The rich and bored up front, the downtrodden and near-feral in the back. Evans' Curtis leads the latest attempt to fight the way to the front.

2 It was a hit everywhere else
It's "only" the 10th highest-grossing homemade South Korean film in history. No. 1 is the monster movie "The Host," also by "Snowpiercer" director Bong Joon-ho. Bong is a populist who stays home, as Hollywood would sand his personal, edgy style down to a boring, bland nub. As such, this is an alternate universe blockbuster, albeit one that was famously mistreated by distributor Harvey Weinstein, who nearly released a cut that hacked out 20 minutes. Improbably, sense prevailed.

3 It masterfully mixes tone
One thing Hollywood would force Bong to lose is his extremes: He has a very goofy sense of humor, but he also loves to take his films to truly dark places. "Snowpiercer" is a very funny satire, especially as Evans and cast (including John Hurt and Octavia Spencer, plus the always freakishly entertaining Bong regular Song Kang-ho) progress through cars, each one a riotous surprise that often radically changes the color scheme. Tilda Swinton is also on hand to steal the movie as one of the heartless baddies, with giant fake teeth, granny glasses and a hilarious Yorkshire accent. At the same time, it's fearless and brutal. Nice characters are routinely picked off, as are entertaining evil ones.

Sounding off

It's genuinely angry

4 Even for a genre film about politics, "Snowpiercer" is more incensed than most. Bong is right there with the poor, who aren't even poor — they have absolutely nothing outside the meager miseries they're given (including food blocks whose ingredients, when revealed, will turn your stomach). He actually lays out class sideways, one section at a time, so that by the time you get to the people lounging in Jacuzzis or clubbing, it's impossible to avoid the outrage of us — that is, all of us wasting our lives on Internet time-sucks or even watching movies like "Snowpiercer" — living as though the genuinely downtrodden don't somewhere exist, screaming for help that will never come.

Lampoon. Amy Poehler and Paul Rudd mercilessly mock rom-coms

Paul Rudd and Amy Poehler pretend to be stupid in love in the comedy "They Came Together." / LIONSGATE

What

David Wain ("The State," "Wet Hot American Summer") helms this parody of romantic comedies, with Amy Poehler and Paul Rudd basically re-enacting "You've Got Mail."

The lowdown

The genre's problems are so glaring they would hardly need lampooning, particularly by someone who should spend his time better. Still, funny's funny, and the "Airplane"-style laughs come early and often. The best are loopy, while others go to some wonderfully awkward dark places, even if none of it reaches the insane high of "Wet Hot American Summer"'s beloved day trip sequence.

'Begin Again'

John Carney, the filmmaker of "Once," returns to the "stealth musical" genre, this time in New York City, with Mark Ruffalo as an A&R guy making a new(ish) kind of album with Keira Knightley. The film addresses some tough questions about the collapsing music biz, but it repeatedly deflates into calming movie lies. Even Ruffalo's uneasy performance can't temper the sometimes toxic earnestness.

TILDA SWINTON

The actress based her "Snowpiercer" baddie in part on an old enemy.

SHE'S GOT THE LOOK

TILDA SWINTON'S LATEST FILM IS "SNOWPIERCER," A DYSTOPIAN THRILLER IN WHICH SHE PLAYS AN EVIL BUREAUCRAT.
GETTY IMAGES

Harvey Scissorhands

On the 20 minutes cut from the film by The Weinstein Company, since restored:

We're a pretty close team, and I was hoping all along that the English-speaking world would get to see Director Bong's cut. And I am so thrilled that they are. I'm not a huge maniac for first weekends anyway. I think that films find their audience, and I'm a very patient person. I think that films can bleed out over decades, and they do. They always end up finding their audience.

For director Bong Joon-ho's dizzying science fiction spectacle "Snowpiercer," actress Tilda Swinton disappears behind massive false teeth, garish glasses and a truly unfortunate side-part to play Mason, an embodiment of bureaucratic evil tasked with keeping the lower classes in line as what's left of humanity waits out a second ice age on a perpetually moving train.

TILDA SWINTON IN "SNOWPIERCER"
THE WEINSTEIN COMPANY

Where did you draw on for the physical appearance?

It's actually a private joke — which is now no longer private at all — for my brothers because they are the three people on the planet who are going to be most amused by Mason for a very particular reason, which is that we knew somebody who spoke exactly like that when we were little. The first year I was able to vote, Margaret Thatcher came into power, and my generation of people from the U.K. it up to here with what we call that nanny state. And [this person] definitely went for that look, that condescending "You don't know what you want so I'd better whip you into shape."

This film deals with familiar themes and genre tropes, but they're presented in such an original way.

[Bong Joon-ho is] such a sophisticated filmmaker and such a unique voice, but he's so educated and he's so cine-literate. He is, I would suggest, the most consciously constructive formalist filmmaker, in a way, since someone like Hitchcock or Kubrick. He has that scope, he has that knowledge, he's got that command. For me, the film is as much about cinema as it is about anything else. ... He knows exactly what he's doing.

'Do the Right Thing' 25th anniversary screening

BAM Harvey Rose Theater, Brooklyn
Sunday, 5 p.m. (sold out) and 9 p.m.
$10-$15
www.bam.org

On June 30, 1989, Rosie Perez first graced American screens dancing furiously to Public Enemy, Radio Raheem blasted his boom box and Buggin' Out got his Air Jordans scuffed up by Bed-Stuy's first sign of gentrification.

Spike Lee's "Do the Right Thing" turns 25 on Monday, and the day before, Brooklyn's BAM's Harvey Rose Theater — with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences — will hold two anniversary screenings. The 5 p.m. one (sold out) will be followed by a discussion with Lee, Perez, Danny Aiello and others.

Bill Nunn, who played Radio Raheem, remembers that, to him, it didn't seem like it would be a big deal. "I was just looking at it as a gig," Nunn recalls. He did see it as important from a filmmaking perspective. "Twenty-five years ago, there weren't a lot of projects for black actors or black filmmakers. We thought it was important along those lines."

Controversy loomed over the film when it opened, but most of the discussions it raised needed raising. It remains a searing look at race, at urban life, at a Brooklyn that is no longer the same. It's also often forgotten that the movie is hilarious.

The screening will kick off a two-week retrospective of Lee's films at BAM.

The truth, Ruth

- "Do the Right Thing" was filmed in the summer of 1988 on Stuyvesant Ave. between Quincy St. and Lexington Ave.
- Some stores (including Sal's Famous Pizzeria) had to be built. The cinematographer had other buildings painted extreme colors.

'Trailblazer Awards.' Celebs honored for furthering the LGBTQ civil rights movement

With Pride Week in full swing, Logo TV will honor several key people who have broken new ground for LGBTQ civil rights with their one-hour "Trailblazers Awards" special, airing tonight at 9. The event was taped earlier this week at The Cathedral of St. John the Divine and celebrities included Daniel Radcliffe, Adam Levine, Demi Lovato, Lance Bass and Pete Wentz. "Orange Is the New Black" stars Laverne Cox, Taryn Manning, Danielle Brooks, Samira Wiley, Lea DeLaria and Matt McGorry were also in attendance.

We talked to Laverne Cox before the show and she spoke excitedly about how much "Orange Is the New Black" has meant to the LGBTQ community. "On the show, we are dealing with LGBTQ identities and stories in a really complicated way, and womanhood in a really complicated way. Queer people feel like it's their show. It's a 'finally' kind of moment," she says.

Matt McGorry, who plays John Bennett on the show, feels the same way. "It's been above and beyond anything I really could have imagined," he says. "To be a part of something that is inspiring change has just been absolutely wonderful."

Two other big award recipients will be activist Edie Windsor and her attorney Roberta Kaplan. Together, they helped win the Defense of Marriage Act case in 2013 one year ago this week. "I don't think any of us could have imagined this in our lifetimes," Kaplan tells us. "When we started the case, five states allowed gay couples to marry. Today 19 states do. ... No group in American history has achieved that kind of progress toward equality that fast."

Daniel Radcliffe honored three young adults furthering LGBTQ civil rights. Between commercial breaks, Radcliffe talked to them for as long as he could. Laverne Cox also couldn't resist running over to hug and congratulate them. EMILY LAURENCE

1 Adam Levine: 'I did not have sexual intercourse with Lindsay Lohan'

It seems like Lindsay Lohan's leaked list of sexual conquests is going to haunt every famous name it contains for quite some time. Case in point: Maroon 5 frontman Adam Levine had to suffer Howard Stern's interrogation on the matter. "By the way, you were listed on Lindsay Lohan's sex list, that you had sex with her. I didn't know this," Stern offered, to which Levine promptly shot back, "That's not true. I did not have sexual intercourse with Lindsay Lohan." Stern then pointed out that no one on the list has confessed to actually having earned their spot. "That's because I think we're being truthful," Levine responded. When asked by Stern if anybody at all has had sex with Lohan, Levine replied, "A lot of people probably did, I don't know." Is that a less nice way of saying, "She Will Be Loved"?

3 The Queen of Thrones

Queen Elizabeth visited the set of "Games of Thrones" in Ireland earlier this week. She looked a little skeptical when looking at the Iron Throne, so we guess the cast doesn't have to worry about her taking over it. The Queen also met several cast members of the HBO hit show, including Kit Harrington and Lena Heady. It's fun to imagine the Queen and her husband being avid fans of a show like this, where nudity isn't rare.

2 Be careful of what you ask Kunis

The Star-Ledger's interview with Mila Kunis got off to a bad start after the interviewer asked about her pregnancy. "I don't talk about that for publication," she shot back. When he asked about emigrating from Ukraine, Kunis stopped him. "I've talked about me moving to America in a hundred interviews," she said. "I know what your next question is: You're going to ask me what I think about what's going on now. ... Just because I lived there until I was 7 doesn't mean I identify with Ukraine." Somehow, Kunis still said it was "a good interview."

The Halfsie

And now for the weird part

The only unnecessary feature of the app is the "Halfsie." It's a picture where you combine your own body with your partner's face or vice versa. The idea might have seemed good in theory, but it's not something you will use more than once or twice.

It just became easier to be 'You & Me'

Digital love. Are you in a long-distance relationship? Staying connected just got easier.

When you're away from your significant other, it's easy to stay in touch with apps such as Snapchat, Instagram, text messages and so on. A new app called "You & Me" takes digital relationship maintenance one step further.

The app combines some of the best sharing features of popular social media apps – such as videos, pictures and sharing a favorite song with your boo.

You start by writing the name of yourself and your partner. Then the app creates a cute logo with the first initials of your names. You are then ready to share whatever with your loved one. It's like sending a text message, but everything is here: the pictures, the videos, the songs, the voice and the secrets.

When you take a photo, there are filter options like the ones you're familiar with from other picture apps, such as Instagram. That way you can always look your best when you send your boo a selfie. The app is also connected to Spotify, so you can send the perfect love song to keep things sweet between just the two of you.

The songs you send each other will be saved as a soundtrack.

Share photos, videos and more with a new app for love in the digital age. / WAVEBREAK MEDIA

Download it

You can download the app for your device for free in App Store and Google Play.

A really fun feature is "The Secrets." You send a picture (maybe with a note), and your partner has to wipe the screen to see the picture and note. You can watch the picture repeatedly, but it'll stay hidden for everyone around you until you wipe, allowing you to get creative with love notes or silly photos.

Online dating is a dirty little lie, part one

There are many stories of couples who met online. They clicked from the first time they clicked: Love, marriage and kids are in their future, and they owe it all to meeting on a dating website.

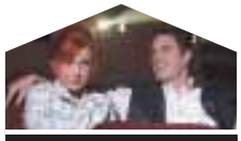
But is that the norm? To find out, I asked 1.6 million people on my Facebook page. The result: an outpouring of missed dates, mixed messages and misunderstood expectations.

Jaded data

Last year, the Huffington Post reported that a study funded by eHarmony found that as many as 35 percent of Americans now meet their spouses online. Sounds impressive, right?

But if you read the complete study (and most people don't), you will be quick to discover that "online" doesn't just mean dating sites. It means somewhere in the digital world of the Internet, which includes virtual worlds, chat rooms, multiplayer games and social networks.

In fact, a recent study from the Association for Psychological Science found that although people are using online dating sites, the way people are actually finding spouses over the last several years remains largely unchanged. According to the study, 38 percent of people met a spouse at work or at school. Meanwhile, just 17 percent met a spouse on a dating site.



For Charles' biggest issues with online dating, visit Metro.us/blogs

The science behind online dating

Proprietary algorithms, tests and questionnaires that promise to match you with a mate provide an air of awe and confidence. But the questions feeding these algorithms are highly suspect. First, to match someone with a potential mate, these questionnaires need to be answered honestly and accurately (and they aren't).

The questions these surveys ask are really about dating, not relationships, and there is a big difference between dating someone today and being compatible for the long term. These compatibility tests don't take into account upbringing, childhood environment and/or teenage influences, nor do they address changing attitudes and needs. And, again, this is all assuming the respondents are telling the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. How often do you think that happens?

Up: Online dating just got smarter. Match.com is teaming up with Mensa, a high-IQ membership organization, to connect really, really smart people.

Down: "Harry Potter" star Rupert Grint was stunned to discover his profile on dozens of Internet dating websites after someone stole his bank card and signed him up on a search for love. Moral: No one is safe from online catfishing.

Fun through the roof

Take in this view with a craft beer at The Roof. / PROVIDED

Skyscraper. The weather's finally warm enough to see the city from many stories up.

For New Yorkers, what we lack in backyard access, we make up for with rooftop privileges. After all, who needs grill cleanup when you've got a server pouring you drinks and heavenly views of the skyline? These venues will give you a taste of the high life this summer.

Plunge Rooftop + Bar

Gansevoort Meatpacking
18 Ninth Ave., 212-660-6736

Yes, it's a bit touristy, and the cocktails are hella expensive, but the rooftop has just been renovated and still offers can't-beat 360-degree views of the city. Toast to the Gansevoort's 10th anniversary while enjoying your seat in the back garden cabana.

Soaked at Mondrian Soho

9 Crosby St., 212-389-0000

After dinner at the hotel's gorgeous Isola Trattoria & Crudo Bar, stick your toes in the (artificial) grass and peer out over the balconies. Are those twinkling lights coming from skyscrapers, or just the strung lights on the deck here?

Pod 39

145 E. 39th St., 212-865-5700

The rooms at the budget-friendly hotel might be tiny, but the penthouse rooftop is not. Step onto the outdoor brick terrace and order up drinks and snacks from downstairs' April Bloomfield-led Salvation Taco.

Birreria NYC

Eataly, 200 Fifth Ave.,

212-937-8910

While you wait for your table at Il Pesce or La Pizza & La Pasta, kill time at Eataly's rooftop biergarten, where the beer is brewed 30 feet from your seat and the snacks are Italian by way of Germany and Austria. You might like the digs so much that you end up canceling your dinner in favor of a rooftop meal.

Midtown

Gerber Group's The Roof

124 W. 57th St.
212-707-8008

An addition to the rooftop scene this summer, this one — on top of the Viceroy New York — boasts views of Central Park and fancy furnishings in walnut and leather. Sip small-batch spirits or regional craft beers.

Go west

Yotel

570 10th Ave.
646-449-7790

New York's largest outdoor terrace boasts food by the team behind China Grill and plenty of sun during the day. A DJ sets the beat during brunch.

Yotel / PROVIDED

Gallow Green

542 W. 27th St., 212-564-1662

Can't get in to "Sleep No More"? You can still get a feel for the place at the McKittrick Hotel's rooftop garden, just steps away from the High Line. Enjoy small bites, punch and, on weekends, bottomless brunch.

Hudson Terrace

621 W. 46th St., 212-315-9400

You could come on a weekend to hear a DJ spin, but the weekday happy hour is pretty solid: $4 Bud Lights and $6 margaritas and cosmos. On Taco Tuesdays, Coronas are $5 and tacos are $3. Plus: Take a cab via Uber and they'll match it up to $25 and take it off your bill.

Hidden gem. The Crow's Nest is now open for the first time since Sandy — here's why you should go

Although there are plenty of riverside bars throughout the five boroughs, there's one you don't want to miss: The Crow's Nest at The Water Club (on the East River, between 29th and 32nd streets) is in full swing — for the first time since Superstorm Sandy.

Although the restaurant was ultimately able to repair its catastrophic damage — with dinner service returning in October 2013 — the restaurant's most popular feature, its rooftop bar and grill, is only now able to reopen.

The venue might have recovered from its ordeal (which involved staff members trapped inside the floating restaurant during the height of New York's second-deadliest storm), but that's not the only reason you should make a point to check it out. Here are three more reasons to visit The Crow's Nest this summer:

Visit Metro.us for a first-person account of facing Superstorm Sandy.

1 Dock-to-dish. Chef Aaron Bashy is behind a special dock-to-dish program in coordination with fishermen off Montauk, who bring their daily catches straight from the water to your plate. The Water Club's menu features these specials nightly, while The Crow's Nest offers fresh barbecue options Thursdays from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m.

2 Between two bridges. From The Crow's Nest, you can watch the boats glide by from your bar stool, or choose a view of either the Queensboro or Williamsburg Bridge. Sun and shade seating is available to diners. In the event of a sudden turn in the weather, head to the indoor bar adjacent to the lobby, if not the spacious dining room with floor-to-ceiling windows overlooking the East River.

Evenings are a great time to visit The Crow's Nest with a group. T. MICHELLE MURPHY, METRO

3 First to know. Because The Crow's Nest has been out of service, many people don't yet know it's back in action. Impress guests by taking them to this unexpected outdoor gem, and get in the door before it's too crowded to get a seat. While afternoons tend to be popular on the weekend, evening is a great time to slip in with a group. Emerging from the nautical decor and formal dining room downstairs to this surprisingly hopping, down-to-earth drinks spot is a must-have "Aha!" moment. T. MICHELLE MURPHY

Pride keeps marching on

Main event.
Pride March has lots to celebrate, but the fight for rights isn't won.

For young people, Pride March can be life-changing. /CHRIS GAGLIARDI

You'd be forgiven for thinking that the Pride March, which brings together thousands of the city's LGBT community, was just a giant party. But this annual public celebration of diversity is a platform for the social and political issues facing people who have only recently had cause to celebrate, says Chris Frederick, managing director of NYC Pride.

Last summer saw the Supreme Court striking down the Defense of Marriage Act, and Frederick praised the progress made since then in gaining recognition for gay marriage around the country. But he also points out that equality remains far off.

"Our theme for this year is We Have Won When We're One, and it speaks volumes on how far we have to go for full equality," Frederick says. "It was a nice move for DOMA to fall, but we can't forget all of the others across the United States and around the world that don't have full equality."

Even as several states have overturned anti-gay marriage laws, LGBT rights have eroded worldwide in countries like Russia, Uganda and Brunei.

The continued pursuit of equality means events like the Pride March remain highly relevant, Frederick says. "We will continue to call it a march until equality has been gained for all. Up until now, that isn't the case."

The event is also important for LGBT youth to explore and embrace their identity in the community.

"There will always be that 16-year-old kid that is attending this event for the very first time, and ... that first experience forever changes one's being," Frederick says. "It allows them to realize they belong to something, that they're connected to someone on a much larger scale."

The Pride March sets off Sunday at noon on Fifth Avenue, beginning at 36th Street.

Horoscope

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. You may be feeling somewhat low or lethargic. Having a heart-to-heart with one of your close friends will help lift your spirits and get you back on track.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Try to learn as much as you can about some casual acquaintances. The information you gather will provide valuable insight.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Use a support network you trust to find information that will let you get ahead. The recommendations you receive will help you access techniques.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Stop feeling weighed down with obligations and responsibilities when all you have to do is say no. Let others help you.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Stay out of the spotlight. Your words could be misinterpreted. A situation will begin to get better as long as you are patient.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Consider making a professional move. You will make financial gains if you apply your unique talents in an inventive manner.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. A spur-of-the-moment get-together will do you goods. Don't let everyday matters smother your creativity.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Resolve some pressing issues. What you are looking for will come to light as a result of a trip or conversation with an outsider.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Keep your distance if discord breaks out. Your capabilities may come into question if you pry into what doesn't concern you.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. You could end up in an awkward position if you act too rashly or thoughtlessly. Show responsibility to avoid jeopardizing hot prospects. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Republicans aren't any more polite

Re: 'Kids should be off-limits to comic' (Metro, June 25) Letter writer John Fox wrote about an imagined "uproar" that might have resulted if Cummings had joked about a liberal Democratic politician's child rather than Sarah Palin's. I fully appreciate and agree with the point; however, please don't imagine the conservative right wing is any home to decency. Republican chairman of 2nd Congressional District Johnny Rhoda commented to U.S. News that if Hillary Clinton tried to run for president in Arkansas she would be shot at the state line. Guns make some safer

Re: 'Put down guns, pick up peace' (Metro, June 24) When will people realize that gun control will solve nothing? It isn't the honest, responsible American that is the threat. It is the goons and thugs on the street. Take away decent citizens' guns, and I can assure you things will get worse. Go after criminals, not us citizens who have earned the right to protect ourselves! I am a 68-year-old widow. I feel a lot safer with my Beretta than when I only possessed a whistle! World Cup preview: US set for Germany World Cup. The U.S. is looking for just one point against Germany to advance to the second round.

For full World Cup coverage, visit Metro.us/world-cup.

The United States squandered a 2-1 lead over Portugal with 30 seconds left and now need to get a result in its final group match against Germany. A tie would send the Americans into the next round, while a win would see them win the group.

It sounds easy enough, right? But it gets very complicated if neither of those scenarios — win or draw — plays out on Thursday (noon, ESPN).

Ghana and Portugal will also kick off at noon. If those two draw, the U.S. will automatically advance. Ghana is more of a threat than Portugal, because a U.S. loss coupled with a Ghana win would bring goal differential into it. The same is true for Portugal, but they have a minus-4 differential, while Ghana is at just minus-1 from its loss to the United States.

Germany looked like the top team in the tournament with a 4-0 win over Portugal to start group play, but leveled off considerably with a 2-2 draw against Ghana. The Germans need a result as well to ensure advancing, making this a fascinating story line for the United States.

US starters

The United States went to five midfielders for its game against Portugal.

- Goal: Tim Howard
- Defenders: DeMarcus Beasley, John Anthony Brooks, Geoff Cameron, Fabian Johnson
- Midfield: Jermaine Jones, Kyle Beckerman, Michael Bradley, Alejandro Bedoya, Graham Zusi
- Forward: Clint Dempsey

Three reasons the US will struggle ...

1 Rested Germans
While the United States played in the late match Sunday in the Amazonian city of Manaus, the Germans' last fixture was mid-afternoon on Saturday. They will have more time to rest and less travel than the United States. For a veteran team, this is a big advantage for the Europeans, especially in the heat and humidity of Brazil.

2 The "Low" down
While U.S. head coach Jurgen Klinsmann was hailed for his work with the Germans in 2006, it was his assistant, Joachim Low, who is quietly credited as the brains of the setup. Low understands Klinsmann, his tactics and is a true master of the game. The pupil might have the advantage over the mentor here.

3 Deflated
Just 30 seconds from three points and a guaranteed booking to the next round, the Americans fell apart after a superb game. They have to regroup against a better team. The backline fell apart early in the game and in the last gasps of stoppage time, and Michael Bradley hasn't looked his usual self in the midfield.

JURGEN KLINSMANN HAS STRONG TIES TO GERMANY.
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Three reasons the US will succeed ...

1 Wink, wink
Klinsmann was a legend on the German national team, as a striker who scored goals and played with flair. He parlayed that into a remarkable run in 2006 as head coach of their national team, when they shocked the world with a third-place finish as the host nation. He remains tight with his replacement, Joachim Low, and it would surprise no one if both teams eschew aggressive play just to get a result. If Germany loses, it'd be a disgrace and they might be out of the tournament. They might just pack it in, which could benefit the Yanks.

2 German-Americans
Up and down the American roster there are players who not only play in the German Bundesliga, but claim German roots. Often, they have an American father who was a serviceman and a German mother. Right back Fabian Johnson and midfielder Jermaine Jones chose to represent the U.S. On the bench, opening-game hero John Anthony Brooks, along with Timothy Chandler and Julian Green, were also possibilities for Germany. These players will be motivated to go up against the nation where they've spent most of their lives.

JERMAINE JONES WAS BORN IN FRANKFORT AND WAS A MEMBER OF THE GERMAN UNDER-21 TEAM.

3 Lots of familiarity
With a German head coach and five players with German roots, the Americans understand their opponent, their mindset and style of play. The Germans won't be bigger or stronger than the Americans and the style of play will be roughly similar. The Americans will match up well here.

Draft day

NBA draft comes to Barclays

New York will host the 2014 NBA Draft on Thursday at the Barclays Center, but it won't play much of a role in the proceedings. The Knicks reportedly dealt for the Mavericks' first second-round pick (No. 34). That would be the only pick between either the Nets or Knicks in the entire draft, barring a trade Thursday. Andrew Wiggins is expected to go No. 1 to the Cavs, followed by Jabari Parker to the Bucks.

Dead weight

Knicks ship off Chandler, Felton in Dallas deal

The Knicks got rid of a lot of dead weight on their 2014-15 roster Wednesday — $18.8 million to be exact.

According to multiple reports, New York traded center Tyson Chandler and point guard Raymond Felton to the Mavericks in exchange for point guard Shane Larkin, center Samuel Dalembert, point guard Jose Calderon, shooting guard Wayne Ellington and the No. 34 overall pick in Thursday night's NBA draft.

While the move does add four players, even more important to the deal is the salary cap relief for the Knicks. The team had little to no flexibility next season with Chandler set to make $14.5 million and Felton making $4.3 million. Felton, who pled guilty to gun possession charges this week to avoid jail time, also had a player option for the following season — making his exit even more important than Chandler's expiring deal.

Star forward Carmelo Anthony opted out of the final year of his deal last weekend to explore free agency and it's likely a return would be based on new president Phil Jackson improving the roster. The Knicks may not hold on to all the players acquired from Dallas, but even if they do they will have saved about $3 million in the trade. Dalembert and Calderon will make $11 million between them in 2014-15.

Though, with Anthony opting out and two other starters being traded Wednesday, the Knicks as they are currently constituted are a shell of a team. The only players from last season who are under contract this fall are J.R. Smith, Amar'e Stoudemire, Andrea Bargnani, Iman Shumpert, Tim Hardaway Jr. and Pablo Prigioni.

The Knicks are still over the cap and won't be able to sign any major free agents, such as LeBron James or Lance Stephenson. MARK OSBORNE

Tyson Chandler was Defensive Player of the Year in 2012, but played in just 55 games last year due to injuries. / GETTY IMAGES

By the numbers

26.5M

Ironically, the deal might set up Dallas to make a play for Carmelo Anthony, with $26.5 million in cap space next season. They still have to re-sign Dirk Nowitzki though.

59.9M

The Knicks have $59,932,898 in salary committed for next season, including the trade additions, according to HoopsHype. That obviously does not include Anthony, for whom the team holds Bird rights. The salary cap will be $63.2 million in 2014-15.

STAY AWAY FROM OLDER PLAYERS LIKE BRADY

Fantasy owners are often lured by the Sirens of big names. But Father Time remains undefeated, conquering every athlete who stands in his path. It becomes a value problem on draft day because we're paying for previous production, not where these older players actually are on their career arc.

FANTASY

ADAM LEVITAN, LIVING THE FANTASY

METRO'S FANTASY GURU BREAKS IT ALL DOWN.

Nearing the end, Frankly

Frank Gore averaged a scary 3.65 yards per carry over his final 10 games last season — including the playoffs — and had just one 100-yard outing across his final 13 contests. The 49ers are transitioning toward the post-Gore era, as they've invested recent draft picks in Carlos Hyde and Marcus Lattimore. Both are candidates to steal reps from their 31-year-old leader, and we know once running backs start to decline they fall off the cliff quickly. Playing in the toughest division in football won't help Gore.

Tom still terrific?

Tom Brady's weaponry let him down last year, but he also saw his passes lose steam the farther they traveled and his accuracy was average, leading to his lowest yardage and touchdown totals since 2006 and lowest completion percentage since 2003. He says mechanical tweaks will fix it, but he is still a 37-year-old quarterback. The Patriots have shown signs of switching to more of a run game, which will continue to decrease Brady's volume. He is a backup in most leagues.

Rice in hot water

Off the field, Ray Rice is facing a suspension for roughing up his then-fiancée. On the field, it's not much prettier. The tape shows Rice has lost the jump-cut ability and burst that made him so slippery to take down. It shouldn't be surprising for a player with 2,746 touches between college and the NFL.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author.

Tom Brady is no longer a lock for fantasy football success. / GETTY IMAGES

MLB pickups

Grab these guys off the waiver wire now:

- Mark Melancon, RP, Pirates — Manager Clint Hurdle has seen enough of Jason Grilli. Melancon will run away with the job.
- Odrisamer Despaigne, SP, Padres — Despaigne throws from four different arm slots. He will get multiple starts with Andrew Cashner out.
- J.D. Martinez, OF, Tigers — We are buying that a swing change and not fluky luck is behind his impressive June.
